Since it is a valid URL, I recommend using an HTTP client to fetch the contents of the file. Look at HttpClient for some examples. The second instance is ll ownload. 26, 2017. Since this is a date string, you should be able to parse it if you are able to find some libraries that could parse date strings like Java SimpleDateFormat. It could be as simple as: String parsedDate = "26, 2017".split("\\.")[0].split("\\-")[0]; Date parsedDateObj = Date.parse(parsedDate); The third instance is jarvally ec2f99d44e lution 29, 2019. Since the PDF is hosted on Amazon S3, you will have to use the AWS SDK to download the contents of the PDF file: AWS s3Client = AWS.getS3Client(); // Get the object from the S3 bucket GetObjectRequest getObjectRequest = new GetObjectRequest("s3.amazonaws.com/bucketname/filename.pdf"); GetObjectResult getObjectResult = s3Client.getObject(getObjectRequest); String pdfContents = new String(getObjectResult.getContentBytes()); The fourth instance is Shree kan 0851 font.
